

MODELING THE INDIVIDUAL-ORGANIZATION RELATIONSHIP
A MULTIDISCIPLINARY APPROACH

BY

KONSTANTINOS PARDALIS

A DISSERTATION SUBMITTED IN PARTIAL FULFILLMENT OF THE REQUIREMENTS FOR THE DEGREE OF
MASTER IN SCIENCE
IN STRATEGIC HUMAN RESOURCES MANAGEMENT

ALBA GRADUATE BUSINESS SCHOOL

2011

Table of Contents

Table of Figures	3
1. Introduction	4
2. An Integrated Model of a Persons' Skills, Knowledge and Behaviors Based on Graph Theory and Competence Theory	10
Introduction.....	10
System theory and behavioral modeling, analysis	10
Graph Theory Terminology.....	14
Conclusions.....	20
3. An Analytical Model of the Employee – Organization Relationship using Elements from Labor Microeconomics and Contract Theory. The Case of the “Compensation and Benefits” Human Resources System	21
Introduction.....	21
The Principal Agent Problem	22
Construction of an Incentive Enhancing model derived from the Principal – Agent Problem	25
Indications of the relationship between effort, performance and behavior.....	29
Conclusions.....	32
4. Implications of the Proposed Model, an Attempt for the Integration of HR Systems/Functions	33
Introduction.....	33
Human Resources Management Functions.....	34
5. Conclusions and Future Work	40
6. Bibliography	42
7. Glossary of Terms.....	44